Many scientific experts have waded in on the discussion. Although some claim that there is no scientific evidence to support the existence of a ‘monster’, there are many who claim the so-called ‘Loch Ness Monster’ could be a pre-historic creature still living today.

Professor Smith – University of Cambridge, Head of Mythical Creature Studies – claims that evidence supporting an unknown creature in the Lochs of the Scottish Highlands has been found by many tourists and locals over the past century. “It’s obvious there is a creature in the Loch that is being kept secret by the Government.” Professor Smith explained, “They don’t want people to panic!”

One witness, a tourist from London, reported that they saw huge waves on the otherwise tranquil surface. Then, without warning, a fin the size of a double decker buss slapped the water with a terrifying ‘smack!’ Could this be yet more evidence of the fearful Loch Ness Monster?
